Judge Reppert Is Severe In Dealing With Violators Of Anti-Liquor Statutes

Court Orders New Salem Justice and Constable to Resign at Once.

OTHERS REFUSED PAROLE

Chief of These Are Two Uniontown Men Who Are Sentenced to Work House in Addition to Payment of $1,500 Fines; $2,000 Fines for Stores.

In sentencing Justice of the Peace Francis Shinschock of New Salem to a term in Uniontown reformatory and a fine of $50 for extortion in connection with the settlement of liquor cases, Judge E. H. Reppert, in court on Wednesday, Friday, directed that Shinschock immediately present his resignation to the governor. He was ordered also to return all money that was alleged to have been extorted. The court did not impose sentence on a conspiracy charge.

Roy Duke, constable attached to the office of Justice Shinschock, was fined $25 and costs and also ordered to resign.

Frank Volpe, deputy constable, was assessed $50 fine and costs. Max Hannan and Louis Kameny, well-known young Uniontown men who pleaded no defense in a liquor prosecution, were sentenced to nine months to the work-house and fines of $1,500, with the provision that there be no parole for them. A supersedeas proceeding was instituted and notice of appeal to a higher court given.

A fine of $2,000 was imposed on Charles H. Storey of Brownsville, who pleaded guilty to selling liquor illegally. He was sentenced, also, to serve nine months in the work-house but will be paroled on payment of the fine and costs.

John Temco, bartender for Storey, was fined $500. Storey was ordered to pay this as a parole provision in connection with a sentence of six months to the work-house imposed on Temco.

In the case of Charles W. Johnson of Uniontown the court suspended imposition of sentence for a week and directed that in the meantime Johnson pay the fines of Bartenders Dunaway and Mesko, employed at the Central hotel at Dunbar, owned by Johnson. The court indicated that the families of the two men, who had been previously sentenced to prison, are in need and ordered Johnson to make payment immediately. Johnson was charged with making beer containing more than one-half of one percent of alcohol.

Some Conneltsville cases were included in the list disposed of.

Peris Melia, who pleaded guilty in a liquor case recently, was fined $100 and given three months to jail, with a provision for parole on payment of the fine and costs.

Jean Dillon and John Dugan of Conneltsville were fined $200 each and ordered committed to the work-house for six months if the fines and costs are not paid. The district attorney informed the court there was a charge of running a bawdy house against the two but said it had not been pressed. Judge Reppert warned the prisoners that "there must be no reports reach me of any irregularities on your part whatsoever."

Dominic Gallo, also of Conneltsville, was fined $100 and given three months to jail, the latter sentence to be remitted if the fine and costs are paid. Similar sentences were imposed on Sam Ross and Sabatina Ticonce of Conneltsville.

Joe Bondi and John Janke of Fayette City were fined $500 each and three months to jail, with a parole clause.

Joe Solomon, of the Republic hotel, was fined $1,500 and given 15 months to the work-house, with the stipulation that he shall not be paroled. It was charged Solomon purchased the hotel from a man who had been convicted of selling liquor over the bar and that Solomon, knowing this, continued the business.

CROW TAKES HIS SEAT AS MEMBER OF U. S. SENATE

Oath of Office Is Administered to Him at Capitol At Noon.

IN EXCELLENT HEALTH

All Parts of Fayette County Represented in Delegations Which Go by Train and Automobile to Washington to Be Present For Induction.

By John L. Gans.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—The honor conferred upon Fayette County by Governor William C. Sprunt when he selected William Evans Crow to be the successor of the late Philander C. Knox as a member of the United States Senate was confirmed here today under the most happy circumstances and in such manner as brought to the recipient of the honor a feeling of gratification and pride. It is the portion of few men to experience in the presence of practically all members of the Senate, the chief executive and other officials and prominent citizens from almost every section of the state he will represent in the greatest parliamentary body in the world, and with his own immediate family and neighbors admiring friends from his native county to the number of hundreds proud and interested spectators of the scene, State Senator Crow became United States senator by a ceremony as simple as it was dignified and impressive.

Promptly upon the conclusion of the roll call of members, Senator Penrose, by whose desk Senator Crow was sitting, arose to a question of privilege and asked to be allowed to present the credentials of Senator Crow. There being no objection, the commission issued by Governor Sprunt was carried to the clerk's desk and read. Senator Penrose thereupon asked that Senator Crow be allowed to take the oath of office. He was conducted to Vice-President Coolidge's desk and the latter, in a clear, round voice administered the obligation. Senator Crow was then formally presented to the vice-president, following which he subscribed to the oath as contained in the Senate's record.

Senator Crow was then conducted about the chamber and introduced to the general members.

When Senator Crow appeared on the floor, accompanied by Senator Penrose, it was the signal for vigorous handclapping by his friends who filled several sections of the gallery.

Almost the entire Pennsylvania delegation in the House was on the floor of the Senate during the induction of Senator Crow.

Supreme in importance and interest and memorable as the greatest day in the life of Senator Crow it was all of this and more to the clear-eyed 80-year-old father, J. B. Crow, who allowed no detail or feature of his son's elevation to a greater distinction and responsibility to escape his notice. He came here by automobile yesterday and since his arrival he has been second only to the senator himself as recipient of attention on every hand.

During the ceremony in the Senate Chamber, the senator's wife and children and brothers occupied the front row of the gallery to the left of the chamber, intently observing every detail.

When Senator Crow was being conducted about the chamber to meet and receive congratulations of members Senator Walsh of Massachusetts, on the Democratic side, observed that the business of the body was being interrupted by the procedure. This expression of displeasure was directed at Senator Penrose as a come-back because of a verbal clash between the senators at the Saturday session.

The gathering here of friends and politicians and business associates of Senator Crow to witness his induction into office was a magnificent testimonial to him as a neighbor, citizen and public official. In point of numbers of people present, cordiality and their greeting and respect and esteem shown him it quite surpassed any similar occasion in the history of the United States Senate.

From practically every section of the state, and especially from his own and neighboring counties, people came to the aggregate of several hundred. From Uniontown and vicinity 10 automobiles brought upwards of 175. Almost as many more came by train, arriving last night and this morning. The extra chair car attached to Baltimore & Ohio train No. 6 yesterday was insufficient to accommodate the Conneltsville, Uniontown, Scottdale and Everson delegations. Several of the party boarding the train at Conneltsville had to enlist the aid of the Pullman conductor for seats in other cars already crowded.

Sensor Crow arrived from Philadelphia by train about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon and disembarked himself in a suite of rooms at the Washington hotel. About an hour later Train No. 6 arrived, bringing the Conneltsville delegation. Shortly afterward automobiles began to arrive and until 10 o'clock there was a constant stream of people passing in and out the senator's reception hall.

To each and every one Senator Crow extended a greeting that had all the warmth and cordiality it has been his wont to display when meeting his friends. His hand clasp was strong and firm and there was that old-time merry twinkle in his eye as he accepted
